

THE SEVENTH.

Reception of the Veteran Association at the Academy.

BRI LIANT MISE-EN-SCENE.

Splendid Paintings and Floral Decorations Throughout the House.

The reception given at the Academy of Music by the Seventh regiment, N.G.S.N.Y., and its Veteran Association last evening was a decidedly brilliant affair. Events of a similar character in the past have demonstrated that whenever this popular organization of citizen soldiers moves toward the accomplishment of a social success the best circles in the metropolis are agitated to their very depths. The first affair of the kind gotten up by the Sevens is doubtless still fresh in the minds of many readers of the HERALD. It took place in the Academy of Music and Irving Hall, on the evening of January 31, 1860, the reception being given in honor of its members who had returned from service in the regular and volunteer army during the war of the rebellion. On that occasion, as may be remembered, nothing that wealth, combined with facilities such could furnish, was wanting to complete the gorgeous scene, which was heightened by a display of feminine grace and beauty almost marvellous in its apparently matchless loveliness and toilette that the world superbly. But a faint and feeble idea of it. It was not the intention of the regiment to have given a reception this year, otherwise the affair would have come off anterior to the Lenten season. They are erecting a new and costly armor, however, and the general financial depression of the times, has to some extent impeded the progress of this undertaking, and in order to increase the building fund it was unexpectedly to the members of the regiment determined to give the entertainment which came off last night.

THE DECORATIONS.

On entering the vestibule of the Academy last evening the eyes of the guests were greeted by floral decorations of various kinds, large pots of blooming crocuses filling every convenient niche, while growing calla lilies were raised from their immaculate heads at every turn.

On the front door, over the entrance, was a tablet bearing the name of the house of the Academy.

There were three large oil paintings of Colonel Emmens Clark, Captain Kemp, ex-Quartermaster of the Seventh regiment, and of the late Colonel Lefferts, the regimental leader, mounted on easels. These were tastefully decorated with the national colors, beside which hung the fine painting, by Nas, representing the Seventh regiment passing down Broadway en route to the seat of war in April, 1861. The academy was built in 1850, and the interior walls were decorated with scenes from the history of the Academy.

Mr. Peter Belmont, president of the New Brunswick, will then assume control. Through Unionists and Metuchen they will roll in a few minutes.

At the present time, however, the "Tally Ho" will roll up in front of the Hotel in that city. Twenty-one miles will then have been gone over, including the second stage.

THE THIRD STAGE.

Colonel Kane will resign the robes to Mr. F. R. Rivers at Newark, who will drive his team of roans to the lead and brown at the wheel. The turnpike to Rahway will then be more rapidly rolled over, and the "Tally Ho" will roll up in front of the Hotel in that city. Twenty-one miles will then have been gone over, including the second stage.

THE FIFTH STAGE.

Mr. F. O. Pritchett, Austrian Consul, resident in Newark, will then take the lead, and his escort will consist of the French Ambassador and his suite.

Mr. Pritchett will enter in a few minutes, and along its principal streets they will roll without stopping to the road which leads beyond.

At Franklin Park, a six-mile run, another change will be made, thirty-six miles of this time having been covered.

THE SIXTH STAGE.

Mr. Theodore A. Havemeyer's magnificent team of browns will then take their places before the lead, with the general escort, and his escort will consist of the North Americans welcome the President.

They will roll in a grand style, and when the audience responded as briefly and warmly as he had done at the hotel, the remainder of the afternoon was spent in driving the visitors through the Park and treating them to a review of the gentlemen's racing club of the Sevens.

THE EIGHTH STAGE.

This will be driven by Mr. G. R. Fearing with his chestnut and bay. No more picturesqueness than that part of Pennsylvania can be found in the State between the Alleghany and the same mountains.

Then through a beautiful country this stage will carry the coaching party to Hulmeville, where, at Worthington's Hotel, the next change of teams will take place. Sixty-six miles will now be marked on the card.

THE NINTH STAGE.

Leaving the Worthington House at Trenton, the "Tally Ho" now with Mr. F. Bronson, secretary of the club, driving a bay and chestnut on the lead and two bays at the wheels, will roll through Lawrenceville and then on to the State of New Jersey.
